Born in St. Martinville, Louisiana in 1979, and raised in Cotter, Arkansas, and Gainesville, Missouri, Travis John Richard has called Springfield, Mo his home for the past 20 years. He is committed to practical, people-first reforms that strengthen Missouri's working families, farms, and communities.

Lifting Missourians Out of Poverty

- Affordability Plan bans investors and corporate landlords from buying single-family homes, prioritizing families over Wall Street speculation. Offers low-interest state-backed home loans for first-time and working-class buyers to build equity. Caps rent hikes for low-income renters, disabled residents, and seniors 65+ to prevent displacement. Modernizes power grid with geothermal and solar for reliable, clean energy driving Missouri energy independence and slashing living costs for all families.
- Medicaid for All offers full health coverage—no deductibles or co-pays—for the bottom 50% of earners. It eliminates the poverty trap by ensuring affordable access to preventive care, vision, dental, hearing, and mental health services. Coverage includes eyeglasses, hearing aids, dentures, therapy, depression treatment, checkups, and cancer screenings, promoting early intervention and better health outcomes.
- Working Families Tax Act exempts Missouri's bottom 50% from income taxes, eliminates sales taxes on groceries and fuel, and sets a 10% rate for the top 1%/billionaires plus 15% corporate tax—funded by closing loopholes. This shifts the burden from working families to the wealthy, prioritizing stability over regressive taxes. Paired with a $15 living wage, 4-day workweek, 6 weeks paid sick leave (extendable to 12), and 3 months paid maternity leave for better family health.
